ELMIRA STOVE WORKS: 4 DECADES OF EVOLUTION & INNOVATION Manufacturer of Vintage Appliances Shares Success Story

ELMIRA, CANADA (April 2018) – Founded in 1975, Elmira Stove Works’ connections to antique appliances date back over four decades, supplying parts for wood-burning cookstoves to local Mennonites, and on to manufacturing cookstoves with 19th century styling.

Four decades later, Elmira Stove Works has become the industry’s leading provider of vintage-styled appliances; offering full lines of circa-1850 “Antique” and retro-inspired “Northstar” products. Elmira’s first manufacturing venture was in building wood-burning cookstoves for the local Mennonite and Amish communities. As the business expanded to include cottage and camp owners, many consumers loved the appearance of the cookstoves, but wanted the practicality of gas and electric models. In the early 1980s, Elmira introduced gas and electric models with the same traditional styling, plus all the modern features of the time. In the 1990s, Elmira completely re-engineered its line of ranges, introducing models with state-of-the-art features including full-size, self-cleaning convection ovens, electronic controls and high output burners. As sales grew and the line gained exposure, consumers began asking for other appliances to match their ranges.

An “antique” refrigerator was introduced, and microwave ovens, wall ovens and dishwashers followed soon after. Much has changed over the years, but one thing remains the same: Elmira’s innovation is customer-driven. “We are proud to be the industry’s leading provider of high-performance vintage-styled appliances,” stated Tom Hendrick, CEO and founder of Elmira Stove Works. “Elmira has always focused on the needs of consumers, developing and updating products to meet their changing needs. Using the best ideas and most innovative practices, we have grown with our customers.” Elmira is constantly upgrading the performance of its products, yet remains committed to maintaining the authenticity and craftsmanship that sets it apart from other manufacturers. Elmira’s products stand alone for state-of-the-art performance, along with timeless elegance and charm.

Elmira pioneered the 1950s retro-inspired appliance category after realizing that retro and midcentury modern products were becoming desirable, but were not readily available. Elmira developed a ’50s-style retro refrigerator in nine “nifty-50s” colors, including its most popular to this day, Candy Red. The refrigerator was a roaring success in the early 2000s but, yet again, consumers wanted other products to complement their refrigerator. In 2004, Elmira introduced electric and gas ranges with modern features and a vintage look. Today, the Northstar line is comprised of seven models of ranges, six refrigerators, three range hoods, microwaves, splashbacks, and dishwashers.

In 2009, Elmira Stove Works came full-circle with the introduction of the Fireview woodburning cookstove. The Fireview brings Elmira back to its roots but, in true Elmira style, it incorporates many unique features never before available in wood-burning cookstoves.

Elmira products are made primarily with North American components and finished in-house, giving Elmira complete quality control. As one of the few appliance manufacturers left in North America, one of Elmira's biggest challenges is working continually to improve overall product quality. All products are custom built to order, a reflection of each consumer's individual taste and cooking style. Elmira does not stock inventory, as every product is built to the customer's specific desires. "We continue to create new, innovative products based on past eras. This takes time and planning. The products we are designing are like fine furniture; the appliances are the focal point of the kitchen," said Hendrick.

Recently, Hendrick was inducted into the Canadian Kitchen and Bath Hall of Fame as an innovator in the industry. "We realize that the more innovative and creative we get with our products – keeping the vintage orientation – the better we can serve our customers. It's not just what we do: it's who we are," said Hendrick.
